Translation is the communication of the meaning of a source-language text by means of an equivalent target-language text. The English language draws a terminological distinction (not all languages do) between translating (a written text) and interpreting (oral or sign-language communication between users of different languages); under this distinction, translation can begin only after the ...

Corpus linguistics is the study of language as expressed in corpora (samples) of "real world" text. The text-corpus method is a digestive approach that derives a set of abstract rules that govern a natural language from texts in that language, and explores how that language relates to other languages. Originally derived manually, corpora now are automatically derived from source texts.

A Note on Terminology ... Advocates of free translation have invented several terms to refer to their approach. The term dynamic equivalence was coined by Eugene Nida in an attempt to avoid the negative connotations of the word paraphrase. Later, Nida used the term functional equivalence to avoid the negative connotations which quickly became attached to dynamic equivalence.
